AT-9 Strategies Review

No Draws Medium Streak – Both Teams (Updated 2021-11-15) All 111 leagues

This strategy performed ok. This style of against the trend draw betting fits with my betting style, so I will continue to use it or variations of it. My staking actually managed to make profit of +2.6 points from 74 bets when the Betaminic version actually made a loss of -1.66 points over the same period with 98 bets. This is possibly due to the Betfair odds, avoiding bets under the minimum recommended odds or the Secure3 Staking plan settings.

For my next draw backing system, I will be using “Draws are in late - All Leagues” which is very similar in its filters to these top ranking draw strategies: No Draws Medium Streak - Both Teams, Golden 6.6 Draws are in late (by Maxi) Ver2 for All 111 leagues (Updated 2021-11-17), Golden6.6 – Draws are in late 2.0, Draws are in late - All Leagues has a low Max DD for a draw strategy and has been getting good results recently.

Not home on. (Updated 2021-11-15)

I caught a very negative variance. It is a higher odds strategy with a large Max Drawdown, which I usually don't like, but I was drawn by its high ranking. Maybe my mistake was starting to follow strategies that I am not familiar with just because they are at the top of the rankings and then caught their natural negative variance. But with two big losing months in February and March, there is a good chance that this strategy is going to have a winning month in April. So you would not be wrong for sticking with it if you like the logic behind it. It is an against the trend strategy that backs home teams that have not had good home form. I do not want to miss the upswing, so I will continue to follow it.

The all period results show this has been its worst 2 months ever in its history. Either the trend is broken or it is due a very profitable positive variance upswing in April. I am going to keep following it because I think that return to the trend line is coming.

I wondered if the updated version did worse than the original version, but the original version has also has a losing run of 5 months, which came after 3 winning months. From this comparison we can see that the updated version performed better than the original version and be confident in following the new version.

The last 2 months have also been the worst 2 months in the original strategy's history, too. I think the positive variance will come soon. Giving up too early is how I missed out on profits in the past, and then saw those same strategies rise up the rankings again with their winning runs.

Contend UD (Updated 2021-11-15)

This one did well. Even though it had 3 months of losses in a row, it then had a big March run and made +6% yield over this period. That shows how picking a set of strategies and sticking with them is important. Giving up too early can mean losing out on the winning runs. That's why I tried to stick with this set of strategies for as long as possible to give them a chance. Almost all of its profit came in the 4th month.

Looking long term, March has been one of the biggest wins in this strategy's history. I think it is now due a negative turn to return to its trend, so I am going to stop following it in April and wait for a losing month before considering following it again. Using the same logic for why I will continue with Not home on., I will pause this one.

Home Dog 88 of 111 leagues

Despite not having good recent results before November 2021, it has had a great run. I really like the logic behind this strategy and it is one of my personal favourites, developed from the original Colossus 01 Home Dog strategy I created back in 2017. Again, it had 3 months of losses in December, January and February according to Betaminic results and most of its profit came in March. This again shows the importance of following strategies long term.

Looking at long term results, this strategy does seem to be in the middle of unusually positive or negative variance and I will keep following it.

Colossus 06 Away Scoring Overs 34 of 111 leagues (2021-9-23)

This long term strategy just keeps coming back. It had a bit of a flat run in 2021, but it has performed really nicely in 2022 and this is one I think I must follow for the long term. It is a true trend and chink in the bookmaker's armour. I am looking forward to the results of my new add-on bets idea for this strategy's picks. One very interesting thing is that even when the over 2.5 picks themselves made a loss, my add-on bets made a profit. So the strategy does find markets that are value I think.

Long term results suggest the Colossus 06 is slightly under its trendline (10% yield) and we can expect good results to keep coming.

The since shared results of the original Colossus 06 show that the updated 34 league version is outperforming the original. So we can be confident in following the updated version.

Over 2.5 against the trend / Más 2.5 contra tendencia (Updated 2021-10-21)

This strategy had really good results with my new over x.5 goal based bots, despite making a loss with its over 2.5 goal picks since November 2021. I think it finds value derivative markets that we can take advantage of. The Betaminic since shared results again show a strategy with 3 months of consecutive losses but profit over 6 months.

I will also use the ALL LEAGUES Over 2.5 against trend / TODAS las LIGAS Más 2.5 contra tendencia (Updated 2021-10-20) version in my next setup. These strategies have different settings so they find different picks. But they are both against the trend types.

Under Home Underdog and Away Winner Streak (Updated 2021-11-16) All 111 Leagues

This strategy had a bad run, despite looking good back in November. With 4 months of consecutive losses, I am dropping this one. Mainly because my next system is built on wanting goals and using more over 2.5 goal picks, so I am going to drop this under 2.5 goal pick strategy since its picks might overlap with the over 2.5 picks. But looking at the results, it could well be due to a run of positive variance after 6 months of consecutive losing months.

Recent results are well below the average. However, when I chose it, I really liked the logic of it, because it backs under 2.5 goals in games where the home team is the underdog against an away team that won their last away game. It looks like a game setup for 0-1, 1-0, 0-0 or 1-1. This one is not especially based on against the trend logic and I cannot think of extra bets to go along with this strategy, so those are other reasons that I am going to drop it.

Backing the Draw / Apostando al Empate (107 of 111 leagues) (Updated 2021-12-09)

This actually made a profit in the last 4 months, but my staking plan ended up with a loss. I wonder if me skipping bets under the minimum odds was a factor. The Betaminic strategy made 64 bets in this time but my bot only made 34 bets, so either the staking plan or skipping bets under the minimum recommended odds caused the problem. The strategy itself was in profit. In the next draw set, I have a new idea to take advantage of related derivate markets and try to get more profit out of value markets. For that, I will bet even if the odds are under minimum.

Looking at long term results, I worry that after such a strong March that April will be a losing month, so I am going to pause this strategy.

TW Under 2.5 Goals Against the Trend 101 of 111 leagues

This strategy also made a profit in the last 4 months, but I added it to my set a bit late and missed out on some of those profits. The Against the Trend idea here is still working though.

The long term results suggest a reasonably stable strategy. I wonder how I can make +X.5 goal based add-on bets using this. If I were to do the reverse of the over 2.5 goal pick extra bets, then I would be betting on under 1.5 goals FT and under 0.5 goals by HT. This would be very experimental since I have not even been testing it. But I will begin to test this idea, too. Due to the filters of this strategy it should not overlap with the Over 2.5 goals against the trend since it is backing matches that recently had many over 2.5 goal results, which is opposite to other strategy's filters which bets on games with many under 2.5 goal results recently.

2. Conservative and Aggressive results for AT-9 in March (A-bots only). Aggressive: -41% Conservative: -17.5%

My monthly trackers for the 2 sets showed again what I predicated, the aggressive settings have bigger ups and downs than the conservative settings. I think for high volume betting the conservative settings are a better choice.

3. System Change: Separate single strategy focussed sets

One of the key things I have learned from this 4 month run is that the “derivative markets” hold even more opportunities for value bets than the main markets. (For example, betting on the over 0.5 goals market for over 2.5 picks.) This was suggested to me months ago by one member of our group who used to work for a sportsbook, and I am thinking that this is an area I need to focus more on. I think I can use the Betaminic strategies to identify a value market and then try and make extra bets on other markets related to that main market, for example the over 0.5 HT, 0.5 FT, 1.5 FT markets for over 2.5 goal picks and the correct score markets for draw picks and the in-play markets for the home win picks.

From the last 4 months, the extra bets on the over 2.5 picks from 2 strategies did very well, making nearly 30% profit.

In the screenshot above, there are 2 of each bot, the first triggered by A05 Colossus 06 Away Scoring Overs and the second by A06 Over 2.5 against the trend.

A very interesting result was that A05 Colossus 06 Away Scoring Overs's normal Over 2.5 goal bets made more profit than A06 Over 2.5 against the trend's Over 2.5 goal bets (+183 vs -59) BUT the reverse was true for the add-on bet bots. A06 Over 2.5 against the trend made much more profit. That makes me think that A06 Over 2.5 against the trend found value markets where more value was available in the derivative markets. This was true for Lay The Draw bets -14 vs +29 (A05 vs A06)

Over 1.5 goals FT bets -12 vs +112 (A05 vs A06)

There is still not enough data to get a conclusive idea of how to balance the staking levels. After I get more data I hope it will become clearer. My first idea is to use both strategies and they will balance each other out.

For a few weeks in March I have been testing my new over 2.5 goal setup.

On my simulated bots PC I ran a 1,000 bank with percentage staking which was triggered only by

During this period, both strategies had losing 2 weeks, Colossus 06 -12 points and ALL LEAGUES Over 2.5 against the trend -6 points. BUT in this time 3 of the 4 derivative market bets made profit. This suggests that those markets are even more value, so much so that even when the 2.5 goals bet does not win, it still makes profit. Now that is a big, big discovery.

The results were similar to the simulation bot results in that the over 2.5 goal bets lost money, but the other derivative markets made a profit. These are very interesting results. They again suggest that even when the main strategies themselves make a loss, the market they selected had value goal based bets.

What I really would like to do is to have separate add-on bots for each of the strategies but that would use up my VPS resources even more. By adding several more markets to monitor, I am starting to worry about putting too much pressure on my VPS resources, so I am trying to put bets into shared bots where possible. For my simulation bots, I will separate them to see more clearly how each performs.

So my new system will involve separate strategies with separate banks for each system. They can be used with one strategy of that market type or by multiple strategies of that market type. I will also try make the costs involved clearer to understand. One big difference with this new setup is that I will be ignoring the minimum recommended odds. The reason for this is that I want fixture picks, not specific bet picks. I want the picks to tell me which fixture is likely to have value markets and then place the main pick and the additional bets on the fixture. This is a big difference from my previous betting style.

Notes on the Home Win system strategy choice

HOMES YENİ SHARE by User GrandEkinoks (Updated 2021-01-05) 30 of 111 leagues

This strategy is an updated version of a long time favourite of mine. It bets on underdogs at home, but the odds and max drawdown is not so bad. It backs home teams who have not won at home for a while so it is against the trend in style. It occasionally has bets that drop under evens, and that can trigger some of the odds-on additional bets when there is a red card or the away team scores first. I think it will also work well with the in-play additional bets at 10m, 20m and 30m. The main reason why I am putting this in as my first recommendation for the home win trigger strategy is because it has just had a very bad month, the worst in its history in fact. I believe this is a real trend, so I see this as severe negative variance and I think I can catch its good month or a run of good months. For that reason, I am adding it into my system for the next 6 months.

The updated version shows more profit per month than the original version, and it keeps a similar yield. So I am confident in using the updated version.

Costs and Planning

I think you need to make a plan to follow strategies for at least 6 months to give them a chance to work. Big data betting is about beating the bookmaker over the long term. For each system I have highlighted how much it would cost to follow the strategies for about 6 months. The target of each system would be to pay for their costs and make profit on top of that. If you are new to this, then I really recommend the Standard Pack of 100 picks to give you a real chance to test out the strategies properly. If you are trying multiple strategies, then I strongly recommend the Gold Pack or Professional pack to keep the pick costs as low as possible.

If you are doing automated betting, then you will need to factor in the Bf Bot Manager software and even a VPS if you choose to use one. For automated betting I recommend the 12 month subscriptions to keep fixed costs low.
